Young adults who are blind learn skills needed to live and work independently
NewView Oklahoma hosts fourth annual Keys to Work transitions institute in OKC

Oklahoma City, OK (June 7, 2019) – NewView Oklahoma offers valuable job readiness skills in their fourth annual Keys to Work transitions institute this June. Over the course of two weeks, 20 young adults who are blind or visually impaired will learn resume-writing, interviewing and self-advocating skills in addition to independent living techniques like adaptive cooking, independent travel, financial management and more.

“Whether they’re entering the workforce or preparing for college, our goal is to provide these participants with the tools and confidence they need to live successful, independent lives,” said NewView program director, Andrea Hamen. Throughout the institute, young adults will meet with local OKC businesspeople and leaders to practice interviewing, develop job readiness skills, and build their networks.

During the two-week program, Keys to Work participants will also spend time giving back to the community. On June 10, all participants will volunteer at the Regional Food Bank of Oklahoma to prepare food for kids’ meals.

“The Regional Food Bank is thrilled to have these young adults volunteer to help prepare meals for children we are serving through our Summer Feeding Program,” said Katie Fitzgerald, chief executive officer of the Regional Food Bank. “We hope this volunteer experience will encourage them to seek out other ways to contribute to their communities in the future.”

The Keys to Work program runs from June 2-15 and will take place at the Staybridge Suites airport location. To learn more about Keys to Work, visit nvoklahoma.org/community-programs/keys-to-work.
