Spring Cleaning

When the weather starts to warm up, we most often think of spring cleaning. Most of us remember to clean out the attic, storage shed and garage. But, it is a good practice to also look at the things that will keep us safe and secure in our homes and limit exposure to hackers and criminals that want to do us harm. With hacks, scams, malware and more, the Internet can feel like a dangerous place these days. And, the recent proliferation of devices, from smartphones and tablets to Internet-connected appliances, has opened us up to even greater risks. But the good news is that by taking just a small handful of security measures we can greatly reduce our exposure to all these threats.

We should complete a cyber clean-up of our data that hackers are interested in, including the following:

- Clear out your digital storage spaces to eliminate unnecessary personal identifiable information (PII) and financial data that could be exposed to hacking and theft.

Close unnecessary accounts including:

- Social Media - The more we put ourselves out there the greater the risk
- Clear your social media timelines, Facebook has a Timeline Cleaner and Twitter has a TweetDeleter

- Shut down and delete unnecessary apps. Remember apps gather and share information behind the scenes.
- Banking - Be certain your passwords are updated and strong and account access is limited to only those you want to have access to them.
- Email Accounts - Over the years, people end up with multiple email accounts. If you are not using the accounts actively, deactivate and delete them. Hackers often target email services and find a back door open to access your data.
- Other subscription services - Such as magazines or on-line accounts that spam your email accounts with unnecessary information.

There are other things you can do to protect yourself, including:

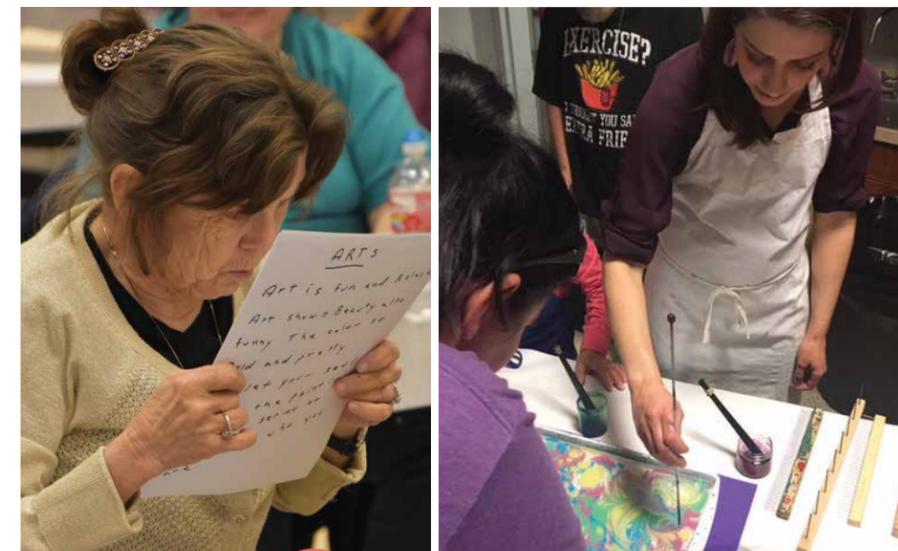

- Install current anti-virus on your digital devices.
- Set up a routine to change your passwords.

Remember, consider yourself a target for hackers when using your computer and think about what you are doing every step of the way. These simple tips can help keep you safe!

Creative Visions Classes

The Creative Visions Arts Program kicked off the next series of free classes on Wednesday, January 17 at the Oklahoma City Museum of Art.
